ABSTRACT

A method for producing yield enhancement data from integrated circuits on a substrate. A database of defects on the substrate is compared to a database of design information for the integrated circuits. The defects on the substrate are associated with classes of design information to produce the yield enhancement data.

58715.pap.doc